Marc Marquez and Valentino Rossi and that great tussle in Argentina. After Marquez crashed out the incident was under investigation, but that was swiftly dismissed, as Race Direction's Mike Webb explains:

"The Marquez incident was a relatively easy one. Rossi was past, and being in front he has the right to use his normal line. More importantly he did not intentionally ride into Marquez, he just kept his normal line. Two riders heading for the same piece of track without intention of doing harm, it's a racing incident."
